How did Queen Elizabeth take her pills? In cider.
What holds all the snuff in the world? No one nose.
At what time of day was Adam born? A little before Eve.

What relation is the door to the door-mat? A step father.
When is a cake inhabited? When there is a little Indian in it.
Why is a door like a colored woman? Because it's an egress.

What is it that a poor man has and a rich man wants? Nothing.
How was Moses put in the ark of bulrushes? He was pitched in.
How did Adam and Eve get out of the garden of Eden? They were snaked out.

Why do white sheep eat more than black sheep? Because there are more of them.
Why is dew like a falling star?
One is mist on earth, the other missed from heaven.

Why was Cowper, the poet in debt?
Because he "oh'd for a lodge in some vast wilderness."
What is the difference between the North and South pole? All the difference in the world.

Why is a lawyer like a restless man in bed? Because he first lies on one side, then on the other.
Why is conscience like the strap of an omnibus? Because it's an inward check on the outward man.

Why is a lady at a ball like an arrow? Because she can't go off without a beau, and is in a quiver till she gets one.
What is the difference between a fool and a mirror? The fool speaks without reflecting, and the mirror reflects without speaking.

Why are hens immortal? Because their sons never set. Why have they no hereafter? Because they have their necks twisted in this.

Guiteau's Ghost.
Warden Crocker, of the district cranky prisoner in the jail declares he saw Guiteau in a vision, and a night or two ago a prisoner confined in an adjoining corridor of the same wing in which the famous assassin was caged created a commotion in the jail at midnight by shouting that he had just seen Guiteau. He could not be induced to think he was deluded by a temporary aberration of mind, but maintained that Guiteau came into his cell and stood there for some time, so frightening the occupant that he was speechless for awhile. He still sticks to the story, but the jail authorities still say that he is only one of the many cranks who have become temporarily insane in the jail by brooding over the crime and punishment of the assassin.

TWO DISTINGUISHED TRAVELERS. The runaway on Chestnut street Sun- day morning was a queer affair, and wasn't a runaway either. It will be re- membered that a number of old horses that had been used by the fire depart- ment were sold at auction last week. One of them, a sleepy old fellow, was sold and traded around until he got into the hands of a man who peddled milk. The old horse thought he had struck something that just suited him in his old age, and he trotted along with the milk wagon as handily as possible, and the German peddler, who did not know any thing of the former employment of the fire horse, snaked his pipe in peace, and emptied his milk in pitchers as though there was no care on his mind. Sunday morning the German was delivering some alleged milk into a girl's tin cup- pette on Chestnut street, when the fire bell struck 317. The old horse simply raised his fore feet in the air and made one jump before the old man could pull up on the reins, when the beast was stopped. We presume there never was a more astonished German in the world than this one. The milk man was covered with spilled milk, and looking over his shoulder at his customer he found that he had em- ptied a quart of milk on her neck, and it was seeping its level, while she was look- ing at a broken pitcher on the sidewalk and swearing at the milk man in Eng- lish that was nearly as badly broken as the pitcher. By the time the peddler got the horse quieted the fire engine and hook and ladder truck and hose cart came across the bridge, the alarms ring- ing, and the crowd yelling, and then it was that the old horse hitched to the milk wagon began to smoothen turning. He started up Chestnut street on a run, the milk wagon rattling, and the German trying to hold the horse with one hand while he kept six milk cans right side up with the other hand and both legs. Going over the first crossing a milk can jumped into the air and came down bottom side up into the German's lap, and he fairly floated in milk, while he yelled "Whea de fo- dama shiannel," or something of that nature. The milk wagon kept ahead of the engine, and at every stroke of the bell the old horse gave an extra jump, until he arrived at the store from which the smoke proceeded, when he turned the milk wagon up to a hydrant on the corner and stopped so quick that the driver went over the dashboard with a milk can pommeling him in the ear. The rest of the fire apparatus stopped at convenient points, and the old horse looked over his shoulder as much as to say to the other fire horses, "You thought old Tom was played out, but I notice his flag is still there, and he can teach some of you green colts a thing or two about a fire department." The old German got out and wiped the milk out of his neck, set the cans right side up, kicked the horse in the stomach, and as a saloon keeper looked at the hydrant and asked the old man if he was going to water his milk, the peddler got in his wagon, and drove off to find the girl with milk in her hair and said: "Well, I tink dot old horse was a crank. He yooat set crazy ven a red-headed girl comes out mit a bitches for milk." —Peck's Sun.

"As that poor man in New Hampshire died of smoking, I don't know as I ought to press you to take this cigar," said a visitor to a reporter. "I can accept it," said the scribe, as he reached for the Victoria, a stranger to newspaper offices, adding: "A fellow who has written up deaths from arsenic in wall paper, from chinchy in coffee, from eating canned articles and from inhaling sewer gas will die a natural death." —Boston Globe.

"Four hostile newspaper men," said the First Napoleon, "are more to be dreaded than 100,000 bayonets." Can it be that Nap. did not pay for the loss notices he had published, and in which he was spoken of as "one of our mo-narchical, etc., etc."?

THE ADVANTAGES OF BEING A BOY.
At the Railway (N. J.) grammar school Adolph Jacobs, aged 13, composed and read the following composition on "The Advantages of Being a Boy": "A boy is generally born when he is very young, and gets to be a man before his mother. A boy is not so skittish as a girl. He takes a mouse, which would scare his sister half to death, and ties a string to its tail and swings it over his head. Then he is in his glory, and laughs at his sister, who is looking for a knot-hole to hide in. He wears no lace bibs or corsets, petticoats or skirts. A boy possesses ten times more cheek than a girl, but if he ever does any mischief he owns up to it with a bright and smiling face. Girls are a great deal of trouble to their parents, who have to keep them until somebody falls in love and marries them. Not so with the boy—he takes care of horses, works in the mines and raises Cain. All that girls do for exercise is to make dolls' chemises and crochet work, while the boy, the spark of mankind, is putting up some job to play on his teacher, or playing the glorious game of baseball. Hurrah! then, for the boys. They are the standard-bearers of the world!"

An idiot boy at Cleveland, Ohio, has been rendered intelligent by the application of electricity. The people of Cairo should focus all the telegraph wires in the city on the heads of their editors and see if the electric current will perform the same grateful service for them that it did for the Buckeye young man.—Paducah News.

THE SUPERLATIVE AT PUBLIC
DINERS.
I once attended a dinner given to a great state functionary by functionaries —men of law, state and trade. The guest was a great man in his own country, and an honored diplomatist in this.
His health was drunk with some no-knowledge of his distinguished services to both countries, and followed by nine cold hurrahs. There was the vicious superlative. Then the great official spoke and beat his breast, and declared that he should remember this honor to the latest moment of his existence. He was answered again by officials. Pity, thought I, they should lie so about their keen sensibility to the nine cold hurrahs and to the commonplace compliment of a dinner. Men of the world value truth, in proportion to their ability, not by its sacredness, but for its convenience. Of such, especially of diplomatists, one has a right to expect wit and ingenuity to avoid the lie, if they must comply with the form. Now, I had been present, a little before, in the country at a cattle show dinner, which followed an agricultural discourse delivered by a farmer the discourse, to say the truth, was bad and one of our village fathers gave a toast to the toast: "The orator of the day; his subject deserves the attention of every farmer." The caution of the toast did honor to our village father.
I wish great lords and diplomatists had as much respect for truth.—Ralph Waldo Emerson, in the Century.

A LIKELY STORY.
A nurse was telling about a man who had become so terribly worn out by dissipation that he could not keep any food on his stomach, when one of her listeners asked:
"What does he live on, then?"
"On his relations, ma'am," answered the nurse.
